Research printing

A Case In Point

A leading investment bank recently selected DG3 as its global research printer, covering London, New York, Hong Kong and Tokyo.

The bank was looking for a single global research printer to ensure consistency of product and ultimate flexibility in where, when and how research reports were produced.

The bank also wanted a management information system that enabled reports to be uploaded anywhere at any time, to be trackable, and to provide data on what was being produced where. Other key requirements included experience, security, trust and value.

DG3 was the natural choice. Through our network of offices in London, New York, Hong Kong, Tokyo and Sydney, we have provided global solutions for virtually every major global investment bank over the past ten years.

ClientNet provides the IT infrastructure necessary to deliver on-line ordering, job-tracking and management information, covering all regions; while our consistent quality systems ensure integrity of data and accuracy of the printed product. The scale of our operation maximises value for all our clients.

The bank currently sends up to ten reports a day to various DG3 facilities, and is able to track the production process for all of them.
